

Native Plant Depot FAQ

CONTACT US: programs@galitt.ca

1) What is the Native Plant Depot?

The Native Plant Depot is a site managed by GaLTT and hosted by the Commons (near the West Parking Lot) as a location for the community to share native plants.

2) How does it work?

Anyone can bring native plants in pots to share; anyone can pick plants up to use in their own gardens.

3) Is there a charge for taking plants?

No! This is a free exchange between community members. (If you want to donate to GaLTT's work, though, you can do so through our website at galitt.ca.)

4) What do you have in stock?

It entirely depends on what people donate, so our inventory is highly variable.

5) When is the Depot open?

In spring and fall. (Summer is not a good time to transplant because the heat stresses plants.) Check our website home page to see open/closed status.

6) How can I donate plants?

- If you have plants to donate when the Depot is open, please pot them and drop them off at the Depot if you are able to. If you need a pickup, email programs@galitt.ca.
- If you plan to clear land, please contact us first. With landholder permission, our Rescue Team will dig up and remove native species and take them to GaLTT's Native Plant Depot. There is no charge, no disruption to your work, and we will accommodate your schedule.
- If you are a contractor, we ask that you talk about this program with the people you are working for and suggest that they contact us.

7) Who does this benefit?

Our whole community! Increasing native habitat to create healthier and more sustainable and resilient ecosystems pays off for all of us.
